

Latest

- Aphex Twin field guide is available and offers an additional 5,000 words alongside many hours of music for Premium subscribers, and anonymous readers, to check out. It is an experiment in trying to make this wiki truly useful, beyond functioning as a rolodex of interesting tools, to offer deeper insights and relations across many areas of interest. Hope you enjoy! This is not meant as an essay, so much as a reference you might browse again and again, without the traditional constraints of being squeezed into a podcast episode, plus the wiki page can continuously refine over time!

Wiki Changes

As of 10/04/2026

- Software is a Rolodex is common software applications you can run.
- A topic discusses applications and other types of things as opinions, concerns, and ideas.
- A reference relates to context, such as a simple how to, or reference suggestion to cropped up through real-world experience.
 - Premium expands all of the above, adding insights, research and details from James for paid subscribers through Kofi.
 - Projects are works-in-progress that may or may not become episode content on Linux Prepper podcast.
- events talks about conferences and events, both past and present.
- This wiki is designed to be turned into a document for offline reference. It is designed to literally become a text-based Zine.
 - Most of the content is restricted to the actual users and subscribers. This is because not everything is intended to be shared broadly, especially small experiments, tangents, and tons of topics that are too vast to mention. If you want to be a part of a small community, this wiki is hopefully welcoming to you!

From:

<https://wiki.livingcartoon.org/> - Living Cartoon Company

Permanent link:

<https://wiki.livingcartoon.org/topic/updates>

Last update: 2026/10/04 21:56

